

Table of Contents

INTRODUCTION	11
Open and responsible policy-making as a condition for human development
What is policy?	12
Basic terms used in this Report	13
The Human Development Report as a partner in the shaping of open policy-making	14
Structure of the Report	15
Acknowledgements	15
CHAPTER 1	16
Public Policy and Human Development
Introduction	16
Public policy in Latvia	16
Democratic values in policy-making	16
Opportunities for the public to influence policy-making	18
Public policy to date and its impact on human development	19
Pension policy	19
Health care policy	20
Rural development policy	21
Integration into the European Union	24
The negative consequences of closed public policy	25
“Important” political decisions in Latvia	27
The losers and losses resulting from closed policy-making	31
Developing open public policy in Latvia	33
Enhancing political self-confidence	34
Overcoming political biases	36
Promoting participation	37
Recommendations by Saeima deputies on improving policy-making	38
Consolidating public accountability procedures	40
Conclusions	41
Recommendations	43
CHAPTER 2	44
The Public Policy Process
Introduction	44
Institutional framework of public policy	44
Public policy agents	45
Economic groupings	47
The mass media	47
Non-governmental organizations (NGOs)	48
The policy-making process according to experts	48
Channels of policy influence	49
Successful political decisions	49

The public policy agenda	50
The creation of the policy agenda	51
Differences between the public and government agendas	53
Privatization on the government and public agendas	53
Decision-making in the Saeima	56
Decision-making in the government	59
Decision-making in local governments	63
Characteristics of Latvian public policy	66
The preparation and adoption of parallel decisions	67
The dominance of State institutions	67
The lack of transparency in public policy	67
Massive, campaign-style, but short-term public participation	69
Overly hasty or lengthy stages in the public policy process	69
Policy without analytical substantiation	70
Conclusions	71
Recommendations	73
CHAPTER 3	75
The Advent of Participation in Public Policy
Introduction	75
The public arena as the central domain of participation	75
Legal framework of the public arena	76
Public participation resources	77
Motivation for participation	78
Support of institutions and like-minded persons	79
Knowledge and ability to participate	79
Financial resources for participation	80
The media in the public arena	82
Forms of participation and public perceptions of their effectiveness	87
Participation strategies	91
Practical aspects of participation	94
Public participation: the example of the Ventspils Integration of Society Programme	95
Monitoring of State and local government institutions: the example of the construction of parking garages in the centre of Riga	97
Policy-making and the defence of interests: the example of reproductive health policy	100
Summary and recommendations	102
Promoting the accommodation of public interests by State institutions	102
Strengthening the ability of the public to participate	103
Improving public monitoring mechanisms	103
Promoting co-operation between NGOs in the defence of public interests	103
CHAPTER 4	105
Administrative Capacity in the Context of Human Development
Introduction	105
The operational capacity of Latvia's central administrative institutions	105
In search of a strategic vision	107
Co-operation and co-ordination	109
The public administration's content capacity, or ability to use policy expertise	112
Policy analysis research financed by the State budget	115
Independent policy analysis in Latvia	116

Government public accountability and reporting to society	118
The public administration capacity of local (or municipal) governments	120
The relationship between the decision-making and the executive powers in Latvia's local governments	121
Local government administrative capacity – education and knowledge	122
Local government administrative capacity – information technology	124
Public participation and accountability	125
Internal audits	126
Administrative characteristics of Latvia's smaller local governments	128
Conclusions and recommendations	131

CONCLUSION 134

Developing one's own civil affiliation

APPENDIX 139

Review of Latvia's Main Human Development Indicators

Gross Domestic Product	139
Distribution of income	140
Price changes and purchasing power of the population	141
Employment and unemployment	142
The demographic situation	143
Health	144
Education	145
Conclusions	146

STATISTICAL APPENDIX 147

BIBLIOGRAPHY 154

HIGHLIGHTED INFORMATION

1.1 Dictionary of closed policy-making	28
1.2 Price list of closed policy-making	30
2.1 The European Union as a creator of Latvia's policy agenda	54
2.2 The party relationship agenda	55
2.3 Extreme model of a closed and illegitimate policy-making process	68
2.4 Petition against the privatization of Latvenergo	70
2.5 Hasty amendments to the Law on Pensions	71
3.1 Stories of motivation for participation	79
3.2 Journalists' codes of ethics	85
3.3 Formulation of the Ventspils Integration of Society Programme	95
3.4 Participation attempts and mechanisms regarding the construction of parking garages in the centre of Riga	98
4.1 Principles of good governance	107
4.2 The National Development Plan – an attempt to create a strategic vision for the country	109
4.3 Euro-integration – an example of positive horizontal co-operation	112
4.4 The creation of the State Chancellery's Policy Co-ordination Department – a step towards ministry co-operation and integrated policies	113
4.5 What is policy analysis?	114
4.6 What is an independent policy institute?	117
4.7 Breakdown of Latvian local governments at the end of 2000	129

TABLES

1.1 The observance of democratic principles in Latvian institutions	18
1.2 Average old-age pension and subsistence minimum goods and services basket	20
1.3 Household income and unemployment in rural and urban areas	23
2.1 The most influential decision-makers and the degree of trust placed in them	46
2.2 Channels of political influence	50
2.3 The most urgent policy issues from the public's point of view	51
2.4 Institutional and voter activity in submitting bills to the Saeima	57
3.1 The influence of the media among other participants in the political system	86
4.1 Manifestations of weak policy co-ordination. Factors and solutions	111
4.2 Latvian ministry Internet home pages – examples of accountability	120
4.3 The use of computer technology and software in Latvian local governments	125
4.4 Local government activity in promoting public participation, and actual public participation in municipal policy-making processes	127
A.1 GDP dynamics by sector	140
A.2 GDP per capita according to parity standards of purchasing power	140
A.3 Distribution of GDP by regions	141
A.4 Annual rate of inflation	141

FIGURES

1.1 Public policy as seen by various political agents in Latvia	17
1.2 Political dependency and influence in relationships between the public and those in positions of power	19
1.3 Model of closed policy-making in Latvia	26
1.4 Model of open policy-making in Latvia	27
1.5 The rejected and the drop-outs in closed policy-making	32
1.6 Self- and mutual evaluations by members of the public, politicians, civil servants and local government leaders	35
1.7 Insights by Saeima deputies on overcoming political bottlenecks	39
3.1 Voter participation in elections and referendums, 1990 – 2001	88
3.2 Forms of participation and evaluations of their effectiveness	89
3.3 Public participation strategies in Latvia	92
4.1 Local government revenues, expenditures and State subsidies in relationship to local government size	130
A.1 GDP dynamics	139
A.2 Average number of employed persons in the national economy	142
A.3 Changes in the number of inhabitants and their causes, 1986 – 1999	143
A.4 Birth rate, death rate and natural growth of the population, 1985 – 1999	144
A.5 Average life expectancy	145
A.6 Division of the population by level of education	146